The history of the Holocaust highlights the danger of propaganda and how societies can become vulnerable to extreme messages. This interactive one-day workshop will offer teachers unique strategies for helping students engage with historical propaganda and view messages they encounter today with a more critical eye.

This workshop has been made possible by the generous support of The Marcus Foundation

Participants will explore content and themes from the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum's traveling exhibition State of Deception: The Power of Nazi Propaganda (opening on September 30). Classroom-ready teaching resources will be modeled and shared.

This workshop is free of charge and is appropriate for teachers from diverse disciplines. No previous experience teaching about the Holocaust is required. Educators specializing in language arts, media, history, information literacy, and current events are especially encouraged to participate.
